

ABSTRACT

A reagent kit capable of distinguishing between a blood sample containing lupus anticoagulant and blood samples from individuals having other anticoagulant diseases is disclosed. The reagent kit comprises two coagulation time reagents containing phosphatidylserine in a different phosphatidylserine content ratio to the total content of phospholipids from each other, thereby giving different coagulation times with use of corresponding coagulation time reagent.